

WIPO Summer Schools

WIPO Summer Schools provide the opportunity for students and young professionals to participate in a two-week long, intensive and interdisciplinary program on intellectual property (IP).

The Summer Schools are offered in locations around the world in partnership with IP offices and universities. They share a common curriculum, though some may offer different degrees of specialization in certain areas of IP.

Topics covered

- International and regional patent systems
- Trademarks and the internet: issues and challenges
- Creative industries and IP: copyright licensing
- IP enforcement
- IP management and valuation
- IP and public health
- IP, green technology and climate change

Learning outcomes

- A foundation in the basic concepts of IP
- Better understanding of the relationship between IP and other policy areas such as health, climate change, traditional knowledge and emerging technologies
- Practical learning experience in technology transfer and IP license negotiations
- Experience of learning from renowned experts in a multicultural environment and joining an alumni of students sharing a similar interest in IP
- The chance to identify areas for further IP study.

Participant profile

- Senior undergraduate students
- Graduate students
- Young professionals

Application procedure

If you are interested in the WIPO Summer Schools and would like to learn more about where and when they take place, how much they cost and how to apply, please consult the Summer School webpage for more information: www.wipo.int/academy/en/courses/summer_school/

Participants are expected to cover all costs related to their participation, although a limited number of scholarships are available for some Summer Schools. Further details can be found on the webpage.
